PREMIER OF QUEBEC MAKES PERSONAL TOUR OF MCGILL UNIVERSITY

SIR LOMER GOUIN BECOMES AN HONORARY GRADUATE AT NOTABLE FUNCTION--LARGE AND DISTINGUISHED GATHERING PRESENT

Yesterday afternoon, at a well-attended special convocation held in the Royal Victoria College, Sir Lomer Gouin, Premier of the Province of Quebec, was tendered the degree of Doctor of Law. Principal Peterson, acting in his capacity as Vice-Chancellor, presided; there was a full attendance of the Deans and members of the Governing Body; while two of Sir Lomer's cabinet, the Hon. Mr. Decarie and the Hon. Mr. McKenzie, Provincial Treasurer and a graduate of McGill, were also present.

The proceedings opened with a speech by Dr. Peterson, in which the Principal enumerated the many improvements and extensions in the school system of the Province inaugurated by Premier Gouin, and destined to be of great value to future generations. In cordially welcoming the distinguished visitor to the halls of McGill, Dr. Peterson expressed great pleasure at the fact that Sir Lomer had been able to visit the different buildings, and to form for himself some idea of the rapid development of the past few years.

Dean Moyses was then called on to enumerate the reasons which had led the Corporation to offer the honour of Doctor of Law to Sir Lomer. His efforts on behalf of education, and especially in regard to primary schools in rural districts; the construction of the new Technical Institute and Business Colleges in Montreal and Quebec; the education estimates increased from $400,000 to over $1,000,000 per annum in five years; and the increase in salaries of teachers—an increase which might well be extended to University Professors (loud cheers); were all formally reviewed. The Premier was praised for improving and increasing, not only the Roman Catholic schools, but also those of the Protestant minority, an example of broadmindedness which showed the co-operation between the two religions in the Province, at its best.

The Principal then placed the Roll of Honour before Sir Lomer, who inserted his name thereon amid loud cheers. In his subsequent speech "McGill's latest graduate," he thanked the University for the honour conferred upon him. He looked back with pride, he said, to his record in aiding education in the Province, and expressed his determination to continue his work. Referring to McGill he expressed great admiration for her work in the Province. Quebec needed the best doctors, lawyers, engineers and scientists possible, and efforts on behalf of education, and

PROF. CALDWELL

ENDORSES DAILY'S POLICY
ON PAID COACHINGTo the Editor,
McGill Daily,

Dear Sir:—May I as a member of the Faculty express to you through your columns my approval of the idea of a paid coach for the football team. I am glad to see that you have expressed so enthusiastically your determination to advocate the scheme for all it is worth.

It is quite obvious that McGill cannot go on indefinitely competing for the Championship with teams that enjoy superior instruction in the matter of instruction and training. And I quite agree with you, and with nearly all unprejudiced students of University matters today, that an efficient and creditable football team is a very great asset to any university.

No one could possibly have attended the match with Toronto last Saturday without feeling that the cordial good will of a vast assembly such as we had with us on our grounds would be a matter of great importance for the future of McGill. Out of such a following, and out of such lovers of a game and a college would come no end of good things.

There are hundreds of men in a modern city who will talk throughout an entire continent—when they travel—of the spirit of a spirited university. And there are doubtless at least a score of men in this city, possibly more, but at least an active number of men, who would not see McGill lose games for want of a coach. If they were only properly approached in the matter.

Before coming to McGill, I lived in an American university city, a small suburb really of a great city, where some four or five men could be depended upon, year after year, to assume certain expenses in connection with the Varsity football team. One gentleman invariably paid for the trainer for the team and made a friend of him, and there were two or three who would even go beyond this and tell the team that they were always ready to help the college expenses of any good football student. It was simply as it were, a matter of telephoning on the part of one or two "graduates" to get any reasonable thing done for the football team or for any football field.

I am led to speak of this because I see that the Students' Council is mentioned as the body to whom to appeal. This body can at its best, have only a limited sum to spend, and it is already overburdened with proposals and schemes. I think I could almost name men among our graduates who could easily approach some city men with the proposal of helping the McGill fellows to the extent of guaranteeing a football coach.

There are men in our city who would do this almost for the reason of giving to their friends and themselves a few pleasant Saturday afternoons.

I say this, too, to eliminate the idea of the Corporation or the Governor being signalled out of the people to provide this along with all the other desirable things. In our sense a university does not exist to provide games for students, and the matter of a "victorious team" is surely one where outside friends might step in out of pure love for the youth of their country and their community.

There are some men in our city who could and would do this modest thing without feeling equal to something else. But they should be approached—not by professors and governors, but by lovers of football.

I find that I cannot terminate my remarks without expressing my opinion of the Canadian game of football should be made, in the near future, less dangerous to the physical integrity of the participants. This has been done, I believe in the States by 'opening up' the game more on the English lines; McGill and Toronto might creditably take the initiative in this direction in Canada. The thorough reform of football on this entire continent would be one of the finest things for 'public morals' that could well be devised.

W. CALDWELL.

Editor McGill Daily,
McGill University,
City.

Dear Sir:—As one who takes a great interest in McGill affairs I find it my duty to take objection to the remarks which appeared in your correspondence column on Tuesday over the signature "A Citizen of No Mean City."

It appears to me that the criticism offered was uncalled for and denoted gross ignorance of conditions as they exist.

The writer is wholly out of touch with what the past few weeks have seen at McGill. He does not know that the students have conducted themselves in almost creditable manner and that the authorities are more than satisfied. In previous years the case was different but we have outgrown that stage in our development and any more "knocking" by irresponsible and mis-informed people is entirely superfluous. The amount of damage done by McGill students this session does not exceed $20. If our "citizen friend" had the interests of McGill and Montreal at heart he should extend his congratulations on the improved state of affairs rather than crying out against an evil that is gone.

As regards theatre night let me reply that the Students Council purchases the whole theatre for the occasion and places it at the disposal of the student body and the University. Outsiders are not invited. Their presence in fact is avoided. They come at their own risk and for them to raise any kick about not hearing the show is in the worst of taste. If townspeople want to see a show on the week of students' night surely to heaven they have enough brains to choose some one of the five remaining evenings when they can recline in comfort and enjoy the show as best they may.

Yours indebtedly,
FAIR-MINDED CITIZEN.SPECIAL CHANGES

Co-Education and the Evolution of Women

The conspicuous success which has attended the Royal Victoria College in all branches of its activity ever since the munificence of Lord Strathcona in 1895 enabled McGill to establish a co-educational education second to none on the Continent is surely conclusive proof of the beneficial results which are to-day being derived from the system of "mixed colleges." The success or failure of co-education can be said to be definitely decided at McGill. This system, which has now ceased to be an innovation as far as America is concerned, has been submitted to a severe test and has stood the test. Those who first exploited the idea of university education for women at the recognized centres of learning brought down upon their shoulders a storm of ridicule and contempt. Such ultra-conservative educationalists have steadily diminished in numbers until they have now almost vanished from the intellectual horizon.

Co-education is one of the powerful factors in the modern evolution of woman. It spells the broadened vision, the intellectual vigor and freedom without which woman would certainly fail to comply with modern standards of specialization and efficiency. In this connection there is altogether too much trivial "banter." Many writers of presumably average intelligence and mental acumen are guilty of the grossest misconceptions concerning the modern woman and the place she is preparing to occupy in the society of the future. With a minimum of consideration and the exercise of something resembling fair-mindedness it is surely not difficult to perceive that one of the most striking movements of the first half of the twentieth century is the awakening of woman. Like every other movement affecting the social fabric of the state this is not without some serious drawbacks but these cannot for an instant be placed over against the access of potentiality which organized society is destined to receive when the movement bears fruit. We are not oblivious to the fact that in some rather important matters the change in condition of woman will mean a total readjustment of social and political conceptions. That all these are destined to come sooner or later is a sign of the times which no thinking being can mistake. The entrance of woman into the arena of active life—a scene which man in the past quite unjustifiably abrogated to himself as a specially monopolized domain—will be watched with the keenest interest by all humanitarians. McGill has every reason to be proud of her co-educational department. Its equipment is perfect even to the most minor details. The spirit which dominates its students is such as to form a good model and example for every other part of Old McGill. It can be said without the least exaggeration that the "venomous monster" the "habitual knocker" is utterly unknown within the precincts of the R. V. C. We are justly proud of the Royal Victoria College and we are confident that it is playing no small part in the world-wide evolution of womankind.

What About Pres. of the Ath. Assn.

In another part of this paper announcement is made of a mass meeting of the student body to be held on Monday afternoon after the Canadian Club meeting. It is to be hoped that no one will receive the impression that the meeting is to be an unimportant one, and that a large number of students will be prepared to discuss the question of whether the President of the Athletic Association should be made a member of the Students' Council. Great power has been given to the Students Council and its constitution is of vital interest to the student body. Should the number of the members be increased? If so should the addition be a representative of the athletic interests? Granted that a close connection is necessary between the Athletic Association and the Council is this the best manner in which to bring it about? Should the Athletic Association be given the privilege of electing a member to the Council? Should the step be taken and this new member added to the Council the mode of his election would constitute a distinct departure from that of the other members. Ought this change to be made? These are some of the questions which arise and which must be answered by the Student Body. Everybody's interests are involved. The question needs thought and discussion. Now is the time for thought, Monday afternoon will be the time for discussion.

HARRIERS ANNUAL CROSS-COUNTRY
RUN AN UNPRECEDENTED SUCCESS

Yesterday afternoon saw the last run of the harrier season, held for the purpose of selecting the team to represent McGill in the Intercollegiate Competition, which will be held this year in Toronto.

The performances were very creditable and show that McGill should prove to be again an element to be reckoned with and that the team that beats our men will have to "go some."

The whole squad was out with the exception of Davidson, who for some unaccountable reason has of late withdrawn himself, and the full course of 7½ miles was run.

For the first mile Kerr, Walsh, Sproule and Murray kept together, the other competitors trailing in behind at more or less regular intervals. The pace, however, was moderate until the second mile, when Sproule forged ahead and set a fast pace which looked good if he could last.

During the third mile Murray took up the running from Sproule, and the pace grew still more gruelling, but in spite of this Kerr and Walsh began to pull up as the lead was beginning to show signs of becoming dangerous.

Sproule again jumped to the front in the fourth mile, but the pace of the last two miles had told and the leaders all slacked up a bit, running however well together.

At this point Kerr's strength began to tell and at the fifth mile he forged ahead, obtaining a lead which he gradually increased during the rest of the race and finished strong in 44 mins. 58 secs. The other four men to finish were Murray in 45' 15", Walsh, Sproule and Brophy. Henson finished sixth and will therefore be spare for the team.

After the fifth mile none of the first five challenged at all seriously, but nevertheless the first and fourth men finished within a minute of each other.

This in itself, apart from the time made by Kerr is a great strength as the team making the least number of points wins the meet and their ability to finish close will thus be a great advantage.

The times of the other college runs are not yet to hand, but we have no doubt that the Harrier Team will give a good account of itself and with any kind of luck will keep the Intercollegiate Trophy to ornament the new trophy niches in the Union.

WATER POLO

MCGILL WINS BOTH GAMES.

On Wednesday, Nov. 1 in the Laurentian baths McGill defeated C. P. R. in both the Intermediate and Senior games.

The Intermediates played a fine game and won by a score of 10 to 2. Considering that most of the men are new the Intermediates should make a good showing after they have become more familiar with the game and a little more practice to boot.

Seniors played after the Intermediate game and also won by a score of 12-3. The Senior team has many of last year's best players, viz., Skelton, DeHart, and Smith. There is lots of good play around College and it is expected that McGill will retain the championship which has been held for successive years. Among the players who are making a good record are Buckley, Pergelley, McGill. The following is the list of both teams:

Seniors—Goal, C. Crosby; Defence, P. Buckley and Baldwin; Forwards, G. McGill, Smith and De Hart.

and Redman.

Referee, W. Gathercole. Judge of Play, W. H. Spurrier. Time-keeper, H. E. Herschorn. Penalty, S. Astorsky.

Alfie Evans and Frank Willis are in the Assaying Department of the Consolidated Co. at Trail B. C.

Dr. Vaughan Black, one of the finest outside wings that ever played for McGill who captained the team in 1909, is also in town for a few days. He has just returned from post graduate work in Germany and is leaving shortly for the West where he will take up his practice.

MacDougal would probably have shattered the Intercollegiate mark on Monday had he not stepped out of the ring.

SECOND INTERCOLLEGIATE TRY-OUT

HELD LAST NIGHT IN UNION
KEEN DISCUSSION ON HOME RULE—SOME POINTED STATEMENTS AND CONTRADICTIONS

The second try-out intercollegiate debate was held last night under most auspicious circumstances. A large gathering composed of undergraduates and outsiders listened with wrapt attention to a discussion which maintained throughout a high standard of excellence. A feature of the meeting was the keen and lively impromptu debate which brought out some first class talent both pro and con.

Mr. Bruneau opened for the affirmative. He pointed out in the first place that the Irish as a distinct people are entitled to a distinct treatment. In the present circumstances they don't exercise the control they should in regard to their own affairs.

When the Act of Union was passed it wasn't passed in reality by the Irish people.

Irish demand real self-government for the submission to English rule has been far from satisfactory. Previous to the 19th century most severe measures were in vogue. The people were practically reduced to a condition of serfdom and the treatment of the adherents to the Roman Catholic religion was nothing short of tyranny.

Then he passed on to consider the period of self rule in Ireland. It may not have been perfect but in comparison with that then in vogue in England it was equally good and then too it legislated with perfect knowledge of that with which it dealt. It came to an end only through wholesale bribery.

In the 19th century no attention was paid to Irish affairs unless agitation was present to force them to the notice of the English Parliament.

He went on to show the great possibilities of the land in Ireland for agricultural purposes and what might be done under proper management.

The Union has not been a true union for it has not joined the spirits of the nations. Only through home government can the two be welded together.

Mr. Newcome then spoke for the negative. He opened with a criticism of the affirmative. The colonies have asked for self-government to consolidate the Empire whereas the aim of the Irish is disintegration.

He then proceeded to the question of a national government at Dublin. Ireland is divided into two hostile camps, one of which wants it and the other does not. Where prosperity most prevails there the stronghold of Protestantism is, Belfast is one of those places and the inhabitants of it are most opposed to a national assembly.

The speaker maintained that granted home rule were to come little toleration would be shown toward British connection.

He then proceeded to speak upon the representation from Ireland in the Imperial Parliament for the discussion of Imperial questions. This is impossible in practice in the speaker's opinion.

Mr. MacNaughton spoke next for the affirmative. He questioned the former speaker as regards the Irish representation on Imperial questions. Were the facts as regards Protestantism in Ireland true asked the speaker. He thought not. History shows that as far as Ireland is concerned legislation has been stagnant.

Ireland is now in a much more wretched state than she was when the Union was entered into. He then referred to Lord Durham's report on Canadian affairs and also to the result of home rule on South Africa.

Ireland only needs scientific principles applied to her land to make her "flow with milk and honey."

Much more suitable legislation would result were it the product of a body well acquainted with what it is dealing.

With home government many of the obstructive tactics exercised by Irish in the British Parliament would disappear and more thought and time could be paid to real matters of imperial interest.

Postponement of home rule may result in an awful disruption between the two countries whereas the granting thereof to the Irish people will weld the two people together.

Would the interest of the Protestant minority in Ireland be sacrificed? He asked in lieu of answer if the interest of the Protestant minority in Quebec had been sacrificed.

In summing up the speaker reiterated his belief that only stagnation had existed since this awful Union had been entered into.

Mr. Griffith closed the debate for the negative. Home rulers touch the main springs of the British constitution thought the speaker.

The establishment of a national assembly at Dublin would necessarily weaken England's power and influence over the Empire.

His third objection to Home Rule was the fact that only more trouble might arise between Ireland and England due to certain species of legislation.

Mr. MacNaughton spoke in rebuttal. He asked the negative to furnish statistics to substantiate his arguments. It is only natural for the Irish members to obstruct Parliament in order to force their issue to the attention of the members of that body.

Refusal of Home Rule to Ireland means a constant menace to the Empire thought Mr. MacNaughton in closing.

After the close of the debate an open discussion ensued and the following gentlemen spoke: Messrs. McConnell, Huguesson, Fartheny, Clawson, Babcock and others.

A vote was then taken on the merits of the question and the result was a majority of one for the affirmative.

Dr. Leacock then gave a short comment on the speakers.

PSYCHOLOGICAL INFLUENCE OF THE FOOTBALL COACH DEMONSTRATED IN HARVARD—PENN. GAME OF 1905.

What good coaching will do for a football team is amply demonstrated by Edward L. Fox in his article "Great Moments in Football," in the November number of the American Magazine. While we do not pretend that this is wholly applicable to Canadian football, the psychological effect of the trainer upon his team, and how he can turn defeat into victory, he illustrates in the following manner.

"There are instances, however, whereby coaches have won games all unknown to the public. These are crises that have been faced in the dressing-room, between the halves with the team stretched out, dirty and bruised. Here enters the psychological, to say nothing of the dramatic. Lashed by coaches' tongues or stirred by the appeal personal, and apparently disorganized and defeated rabble often becomes a steady but furious fighting unit. For instance—

"In 1905 Pennsylvania went to their dressing-room after playing a 6 to 6 first half with Harvard. The tie score was misleading. Harvard had played the better football. They had ripped the Red and Blue line to tatters. And Harvard would have crushed Pennsylvania if Mike Murphy the veteran trainer, had not jumped upon a table and talked three minutes to the team. Murphy, Mike Anthony, was no orator.

"Do you want a lot of bean-eaters up there in Boston to crow over the hash their team made of you?" cried he. "They'll turn that city inside out and on good Penn. money at that. Your friends'll be courtin' free lunch counters for weeks if you let those dubs get away with this? Myself—it almost made me cry to see those big stiffs walk all over you." (He gulped noticeably.) "Because I know how good you are. You weren't right that half. You'll kill 'em now. You've got to. Think of the crowd. And say, fellows, if there's no mother, father, sister or girl up there watchin', just think of me, fellows. Think of me, that takes care of you all. For I've got the 'con.' boys."

"He coughed, brushed his eyes with the back of his hand, and faltered on—

"I won't be with you very much longer, and I want you to win this game."

"He finished speaking and stole away without a word. There was no cheering" the men were thinking too hard. The next half Harvard found a different Pennsylvania team—a team whose emotions were keyed up to such a pitch that their fierce football has never since been seen at Franklin Field. Harvard was dazed, swept away and beaten—because a man spoke. Today Murphy is alive and well."—American Magazine.

Professor Dale made an interesting speech on problems of education in Quebec, and suggested that the good work might be extended to the realm of higher education. Money would naturally be needed for this, but Professor Dale thought that this would be forthcoming for such a good purpose.

McGill are by no means underestimating Ottawa's strength, and every man will go on the field prepared to play the game of his life. It has not yet been decided who will give the signals, but whoever holds down the quarter-back position will probably run the team.

A great improvement in catching and generalship over the form displayed against Toronto is looked for and with the backs working smoothly together and pulling off the same combination plays as they did against Queen's, McGill should be on top when the final whistle blows. Here's hoping!

LA SOCIETE FRANCAISE---UNIQUE AND ACTIVE ORGANIZATION

SOME SPECIAL FEATURES OF THE SEASON'S WORK---FUNCTIONS OF VARIOUS KINDS WILL BE HELD

The aim of "La Societe" as set forth in the first article of her statutes read as follows:—"Le but de cette societe est de repandre le gout de la langue, de la litterature, de l'art et de la pensee francaise par un les etudiantes et les graduees de l'Universite."

But to arrive at a practical means of achieving this end has ever proved a difficult, and at times a seemingly hopeless task. I think that in the past we have all felt something wanting. The meetings of the Society, which consisted for the most part of lectures given, some by members of our own faculty, others by outsiders who felt interested in the welfare of the Society, were not devoid of interest, nor, as far as they went could they be called other than successful. The subjects were well and aptly selected, charmingly treated, and one may venture to say thoroughly enjoyed by those present. But after attending a few of those meetings one could not but feel that there was something wanting. Those few faithful followers, that never-changing group of "old familiar faces" the seemingly chosen few could surely not be taken to represent "les etudiantes." They were but a small, very small part of the number of students taking French.

Now, when we reflect that, with the exception of first year students, French is entirely an optional subject, and again when we compare the number taking it with the number of members attending the meetings of a society which is avowedly devoted to their interests, one cannot but ask oneself the reason for this condition of affairs. Surely it is not the aim of students who of their own free will elect to take French during their college course to attain merely a certain proficiency in translating silly little catch sentences such as one seldom or never makes use of, or, as they become farther advanced, prose selections of varying difficulty in a stilted, forced, pedantic style which satisfies the requirements of an examination, of their unfortunate professor, or rather which he endures because grammatically they are correct, without their being able to express fully provided, placed in a convenient position, very much in evidence, and many had recourse thereto. The topics, six in number, seemed to awaken much interest and one in particular to cause much merriment—that which called for one's favorite joke. That it's no joke to joke in French all believed before the end of the allotted period. But as nearly everyone contrived to find or borrow a joke all went well. And so it was with the other numbers. After the stiffness had worn off matters went quite smoothly and many even developed conversational prowess of which they were heretofore unaware. Besides I am sure that many went away feeling that they had left behind not a little of their timidity and awkwardness. Refreshments were served and altogether the affair was very informal and thoroughly enjoyable.

SOME SUGGESTIONS REGARDING THE LIBRARY

In the heat of its righteous indignation, the Daily in one of its baby issues, passed caustic comment on the so-called library hog. In a paper of the high literary merit of the Daily, this vulgar parlance seldom finds expression. But the thoughts which passed through the minds of some Arts Undergraduates on Monday night would hardly bear an utterance, let alone being set down in print. The facts were, that the library was quite full of students, many of whom were preparing for an examination by Dr. Leacock on the following day. Along came a student, quite apparently not for purposes of study, since he wore his overcoat, but prepared to enter into a lengthy and voluble conversation with a friend, which, to make matters worse, was carried on in abominable French, savoured with a strong Yiddish accent.

The Daily tries to be charitable in all its criticisms but cannot too strongly condemn this sort of ignorant impropriety, which is becoming all too prevalent in the library. Most men have decency enough not to require this admonition, and it is hoped that these will join with the Daily in its campaign to make the library what it ought to be, a place where quiet study may be accomplished.

R. M. S. plays Varsity Seconds in Toronto on Saturday in a semi-Fraternization for the Intermediate Championship of Canada. The Toronto press are looking for a victory for the Collegians but it is generally conceded that the Cadets will give them a tough struggle. The R. M. S. Seconds play the Varsity Thirds on the same day. The Intermediate play-off will require home and home games.

PRINCESS THEATRE

An elaborate production of Balfe's famous and ever popular opera "The Bohemian Girl" is announced at the Princess week of November 6th.

This special production of the opera was made by the Aborn Opera Company last season and is reported to have proved one of the truly big successes of the year. In times back almost every production of this opera has been of the meagrest variety. And yet, despite these shortcomings, "The Bohemian Girl" has never failed to attract. The reason of this, of course, was owing to Balfe's delightful score. It is announced that in the present revival of the opera in this city, besides a massive staging of unusual significance one hundred and fifty people will be employed. To see this old favorite in so splendid a setting, and with an assemblage of notable singers, should prove a rare treat. When the Aborn Company gave "The Bohemian Girl" as one of the repertoire a few weeks back, it proved the most popular of the several offerings. This was no unusual thing as far as "The Bohemian Girl" is concerned, for since its premiere at the Drury Lane Theatre, London, in 1841, it has been what might be called a universal favorite. It has been translated into all continental languages, and is in the repertoire of every repertoire company presenting the standard of grand opera. It is said Messrs. Aborn have made Balfe's masterpiece the basis of one of the most colossal spectacular productions of the age, retaining all its melodious gems, which include "I Dreamt I Dwelt in Marble Halls," "Through the Valleys and the Hills," "The Heart Bowed Down," "The Fair Land of Poland," "Then You'll Remember Me," "Tis Sad to Leave the Fatherland," etc. Besides the full grand opera company, which includes soloists, big chorus and dazzling corps de ballet, a cavalcade of horses, bands of real gypsies, a troupe of whirlwind acrobats, live animals and poultry, etc., are consistently introduced in the Big Fair and Gypsy scenes as incidental detail.

ORPHEUM THEATRE

After two years' triumph in Europe, New York's famous classic dancer, Princess Rajah, returns with all the glory of success attached to her name, and will make her first appearance in Canada at the Orpheum, next week, offering her tremendous creations, "The Cleopatra Dance," and the particularly attractive "Arabian Chair Dance." The former dance is taken from the story of the wicked but beautiful Queen Cleopatra, who after hearing of the death of her lover, Mark Anthony, indulged in a wild weird original dance, finally playing with and tantalizing a pet snake. Suddenly coming upon the picture of Mark Anthony, she became stricken with remorse and placing the snake to her bosom, permitted it to bite her, from the effects of which she died. In the Arabian Chair Dance, Rajah combines grace and strength to such a degree, that a performance to equal it has never been attempted. Charles Leonard Fletcher, the well-known legitimate actor will offer, with his excellent company, Percival Knight's great dramatic sketch entitled "His Nerve," in which Mr. Fletcher has been making a name for himself all over the country as an actor of great ability in emotional roles, such as he plays in this sketch.

George E. Reno, with his company, including Mutt and Jeff, will offer what will prove to be the funniest comedy offering of the present season, "The Misfit Army." Swor and Mack are black-face comedians, far above the usual acts of this nature, both comedians having been seen on Broadway in various productions in which they played comedy roles with the black make-up. The Amorous Sisters are French girls, they do a very pretty and novel trapeze act. Watson and Little will offer a refined and up-to-the-minute singing and comedy sketch entitled "A Matrimonial Bargain." Lillian Ashley, a very charming little singing comedienne, will hold an important position on the bill, as will the College Trio, who will offer a neat little sketch called "The Rehearsal." During the course of this act three different vaudeville turns being given on a stage within
